How time flies.....

It was the year 2000 and reaching forty years of age I felt a new direction in my working career was required.

Stainless Brass and Glass Ltd was formed in the February of that millennium year, encompassing all that entails in setting up a new business. Up to this point my main focus was running projects within budget, on time and being happy with the quality and workmanship.

It was time to build on this.

A more bespoke service was developed offering different glass products alongside the traditional stainless steel, brass and bronze elements already out there in the industry, including the use of more customised quality finished steelwork incorporating structural elements where necessary. This more diverse blend would give a better choice and scope for both designers and clients.

Today eight years on and several hundred projects down the line, SBG is building constantly on those early days using both old and new methods to provide different dynamic work on projects both large and small.

We pay attention to detail and listen to your requirements. Our team are there to help implement your ideas, coupled with our own expertise, to give you a bespoke tailored service of which we can all be proud.

Got an idea..... give us a call.
